INTRODUCTION.

THE original intention of the writer was to prepare an index to the second volume of "The Polynesian Race" for his own reference, and following the completion of this portion, several Honolulu students of Hawaiian antiquities to whom Judge Fornander's work had proved of great value expressed the hope that the index so prepared might be made generally available by publication. On thinking over the subject, the writer decided that before submitting the matter to the Trustees of the Museum for consideration as to its publication by the Museum press, it would be better to complete the work by adding the index to the first and third volumes, a table of contents and a bibliography, all of which work Judge Fornander would perhaps have supervised had he lived more conveniently near to his publishers. These additions have now been made and the combined results are herewith submitted.

It would seem to be somewhat late in the day to present this index to the public, but the widespread interest which Polynesian matters are now commanding is perhaps sufficient excuse.

To facilitate reference to the large amount of material in "The Polynesian Race", sub-titles have been arranged under the names of the more frequently mentioned characters in Hawaiian history, in fair chronological order; also, wherever a subject warranted it, numerous sub-heads were added.

The genealogical tables in Volume I contained several hundred names not again referred to throughout the whole work, and many pages have been saved in the index by the omission from it of such names.

In the third volume, the indexing of the Comparative Vocabulary seems to suggest the man who undertook to index Webster's Dictionary, but it was considered necessary, as Judge Fornander had followed the order set forth in the Hawaiian alphabet. This portion is briefly listed, only the words heading the section being included.

Judge Fornander deplored the poverty of his library, and it must be understood that the books mentioned in the bibliography do not necessarily represent the best works or editions. In addition to his own, Judge Fornander made use of the formerly existing Hawaiian Government Library, which, with the former, has since been divided between the present Honolulu Library Association, the Hawaiian Historical Society and the Bernice P. Bishop Museum. I have consequently been able to find and check most of his books of reference.

At the invitation of the Trustees of the Museum, Dr. W. D. Alexander has kindly consented to prepare a brief biographical sketch of Judge Fornander, with whom he was well acquainted.

JOHN F. G. STOKES.

A Brief Memoir of Abraham Fornander.

BY W. D. ALEXANDER, LL.D.

THE historian Abraham Fornander was descended from a line of distinguished clergymen and scholars, both his grandfather, Rev. Abraham Fornander, D.D., and his father Rev. Anders Fornander, D.D., having held high positions in the Lutheran Church of Sweden.

He was born in the parsonage of Gerdlösa in the south of Sweden, November 4, 1812. Very little is known of his early life. It is evident, however, that he received a thorough classical education, first, no doubt, in the Gymnasium of Kalmar, in which his father, who died in 1828, had been a professor. From a cursory remark in the preface to the first volume of his work on the Polynesian race, we learn that he had afterwards been a student in the famous University of Upsala, where he attended the lectures of Professor Geijer, the national historian and poet of Sweden. A footnote to a brief biography of his father, published in 1836, states that "His son, Theodor Karl, is a doctor of medicine, and Abraham is a captain in North America."

An obituary of the latter published in the Pacific Commercial Advertiser of November 2, 1887, gives the following information concerning him:

"He first came to the Islands in 1838, and after a short stay went away on a whaling cruise in a whaler, returning in 1842. He then commenced to plant coffee in Nuuanu valley for Dr. T. C. B. Rooke. In 1847 he was engaged in surveying Dr. Rooke's lands. The same year he was married to Pinao Alanakapu, a chiefess from the island of Molokai, who died in 1857. They had four children, three girls and one boy. The late Mrs. Catherine Brown was the only one that survived him. Two years later, at the height of the gold fever, he went to California, but returned in three or four months, not well satisfied with his trip.

"In 1852 he was editing the Weekly Argus, with Matthew K. Smith as publisher. He succeeded C. G. Hopkins as editor of the Polynesian, which position he held until 1864, when he was appointed Circuit Judge of Maui. In 1865 Kamehameha V appointed him Inspector-General of Schools, and in May, 1871, he was reappointed Circuit Judge of Maui, which position he held until the latter part of 1886. On December 28 of that year he was appointed Fourth Associate Justice of the Supreme Court."

He died November 1, 1887, after a long and painful illness. He was a man of unquestioned integrity, of blameless private life, and of untiring industry. Deeply interested, as he was, in the Hawaiian race, to which he was closely attached by family ties, he devoted most of his time during the last thirty years of his life to the collection and study of its traditions. It may truly be said that he did more to preserve its ancient history and folk-lore than any other man. It was his life work, and though his theories about the origin of the race may not gain general acceptance by future ethnologists, yet his three volumes will continue to be a storehouse of trustworthy information on the history and legends of Hawaii.

The publication at this late day of this Index to his works is a sufficient proof of the estimation in which they are held.
